Chick Chats

When a person is sick or convalescing, he needs good care as well as drug treatment.

The same is true of poultry. Birds that have become run-down from disease require an extra amount of management.

First of all, the run-down or convalescent bird needs help with its eating. Probably sickness has caused the bird to lose its place at the feed hopper. Therefore, special effort should be made to assure the weaker individuals uncontested feeding space.

One of the new ideas for assuring run-down, non-laying birds enough feed is to place them in individual cages. These cages provide an ideal environment for rehabilitation of such birds.

The feed needs to be particularly easy to digest for sick or convalescent birds. Disease often damages the absorptive surface of the intestines so that the bird gets little benefit from the feed it takes in. An easily digested feed such as mash will help the convalescent the most.

It may take some special efforts to get run-down birds eating —although providing feeder space and digestible feed usually takes care of this. Wet-mash feedings may be the answer, or appetizers placed in the feed should do the trick.

The fowl normally needs minerals for bone structure, formation of shell on eggs, and general maintenance. Hence, in the run - down bird there is a definite increased need for mineral matter.

Supply a ration that is rich in iron, copper, manganese, and other minerals. They will replace the overdrawn minerals (taken from the bones and tissues of the bird) and thus will strengthen the body.

Run-down birds need plenty of water, too. They should be kept warm and dry. Protect them from diseases and stresses that contribute to disease.

Be sure the weak birds, as well as normal layers, receive ample vitamin A and D. The feed should contain these vitamins if it is a well-formulated commercial feed, or supplementary feedings of fish-liver oil may be given.

Health and Beauty

It's very important to know how to select your children's shoes. By knowing what to look for in the way of a good fit, you may well be doing a great deal to assure your child freedom from foot trouble in adult life. You can't let the youngster go barefoot all the time, desirable as that might be from the standpoint of unrestricted foot development.

We will assume that your child's feet are normal. If you think something may be wrong with them, seek a doctor's advice. Consider the style of design of a shoe. You may choose a certain type shoe because they stay on better or for protection against cold and slush or for what your child may think is the most important reason of all because everyone else is wearing them.

Comfort is a good guide to proper footwear. You will want lots of room for the muscles to work in and the circulation and ventilation the weather demands. A good idea is to give children oxfords for winter and loafers or sandals for summer.

The best material for shoes is still leather. Some waterproof materials being used tend to cause rashes. Doctors say that blocking evaporation is a common cause of athlete's foot.

A good thing to look for is a well-made oxford with non-pointed toes, leather soles and rubber heels. Many doctors recommend the "blucher" style. Leather sandals are fine for the warm summer months. Remember that children tend to outgrow shoes before they wear them out.

Discard a pair of shoes as soon as the child outgrows them. They should not be handed down or saved for a younger child.

FIREMEN HAVE SQUIRT GUN

Wewoka, Okla.- Local firemen are the envy of all the small boys hereabout. They have built a "water gun" that is designed for use at large fires where regular hose pressure could not throw the water far enough. The portable squirter is capable of projecting a stream 175 feet at the rate of 369 gallons a minute. It can be handled by one man.

In Fashion Now

In fashion Now . . . . . .

For most of us, the most important single purchase in a new season is either a new suit or a coat. The reason for this is simple—a suit of a coat represents quite a large outlay of money.

During a season when a great many of fashion changes are being made, the idea of buying something new is frightening. It is hard to be sure if the trend is going to be a passing one or whether it would be wise to invest in something that at the moment seems noteworthy.

When faced with this problem, it is a good idea to keep in mind that a good change is never violent. Therefore, if the new design or cut is drastic, it would be better to choose something more time tested. This rule applies even when the new design is becoming if you must watch your dollars.

From all reports the fashiin business is booming. Women like the new fall styles. The reason may be that they are not startling or overdramatic. The general fashion outlook is pleasing and beautiful and women are allowed a great deal of leeway in their choice. There is a tremendous variety of silhouettes, textures and color.

Classic suit and coat designs do not have to be dull-looking just because they are that. There is a great need in every woman's wardrobe for the crisp, devoid of detailing, and handsome suit or coat, made of fine fabric.

Contrasting colored heels on shoes are something new this fall. The new heel is very slender and is called the "Rapier heel." One interesting pair of fall shades is fashioned of doeskin in the classic pump design. Their rapier heels are enclosed in an aluminum casing.

One line of shoes has a removable-type heel, and comes with a set of heels in three different colors.
